The story:A strange miasma falls over a small town leaving many of the townsfolk sick and Tommy's wife in terminal condition. Tommy receives a cure from a witch at the edge of town but there isn't a lot so he has to choose between giving all of it to his wife or using it to help many others in the town. John chooses his wife in hopes of returning later to the witch to help make a cure for the rest of the town when he returns the witches house is gone, Tommy later is left alone in a ghost town full of rotting corpses and his recovering wife wondering if he made the right choice, as the miasma lifts.

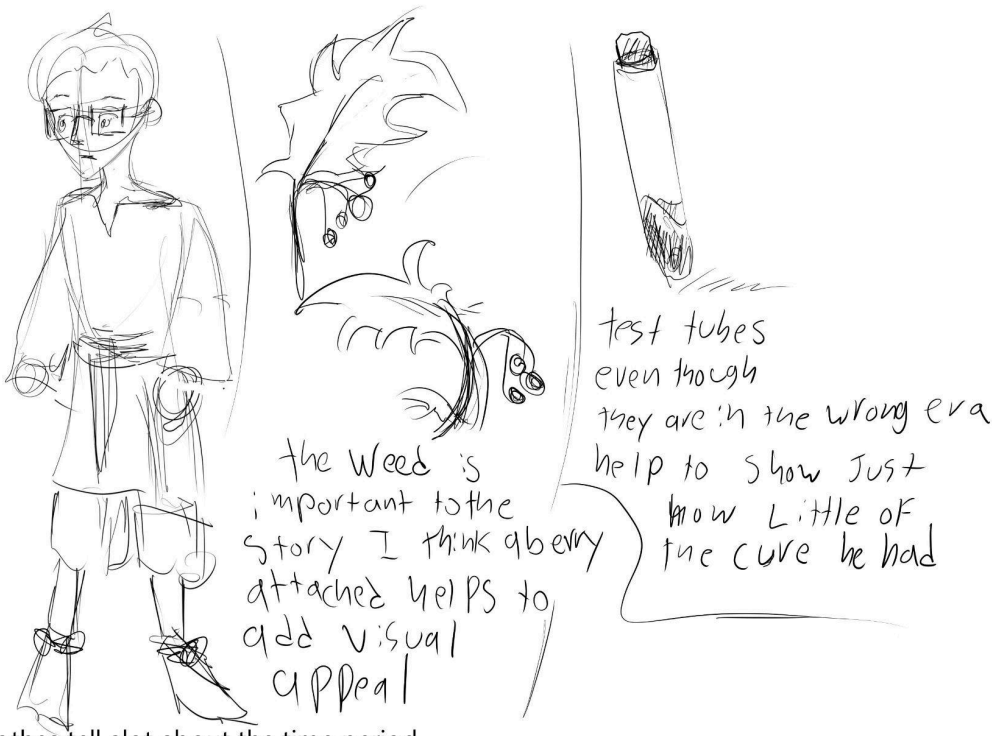

John was a mayor of a small town when the miasma fell causing him and many others in the town to become sick. He learns that a man who made the trek to the crazy witch at the edge of town has the cure but when he talked to the man he refused to give it to him. John now must choose to respect this man's choice and return with him to the witch in hopes of making a cure or steal it from him to help himself and the most people. He decides that he will trust this man and goes with him to the witch. On the way there he becomes even more sick but presses on till he reaches the witches house, or at least where it should have been. He dies with tears in his eyes knowing he made the wrong choice

Sarah is the witch guardian of a small town who the people hate and banished her far from the town. She warned them many times of the upcoming miasma that she would not be able to save them and told them how to prepare for it by planting a curtain weed by their house but no one listened to her except Tommy. When the miasma fell over the town, Tommy came to her with the weed and begged her to help save the town and his wife. The cure to this curse would require her to sacrifice her spark which would cause her to vanish forever if more people had listened she would have been able to make more of this cure. Now she must choose to sacrifice herself for very few or likely, just 1 person or to continue to live and find a better town that she could protect and that would listen to her. She decided that because Tommy had listened to her he was worth it. She made the potion and told him it could only save a few less sick or one extremely sick and told him to go quickly. She watched him go and her things fade away trusting Tommy to do what he felt was best clothes tell alot about the time period.

i feel that the midevil era might fit the overall story better
so he gets midevil clothes
(he keeps the glasses though)
