Out of the list of approved movies there were only like 5 I hadn't yet seen. Which kinda surprised me. I chose the iron giant because I remember seeing ads for it when I was a kid but I never actually got around to watching it till now. It was also the oldest movie on the list I hadn't seen.

When I was watching it, I kept an eye for animation principles. It was really kinda cool to see how much of it was used. I also really loved the character designs. They all worked really well together. I kinda miss animation like this. I feel nowadays a lot of characters in animation look the same and that's kinda boring. In this movie all the characters had different looks which really helped elevate my experience.
